ROBIN, late 20's

ROBIN is the side kick to Batman. He is speaking a support group for sidekicks.

ROBIN

Hi I'm Richard Grayson, AKA Robin. I've been a side kick now for... 7 years. And at first, it was great. I was an orphan. Didn't know what I wanted to do with my life and then like... the coolest super hero ever came along and asked me to be his side kick. And I was like "yes, absolutely, Batman. That sounds like the best idea ever." I mean who wouldn't jump at the chance to work with Batman. But, I should've known when he named me Robin that it was going to be a rough road. I mean imagine the meanest, toughest criminal you've ever seen. And then imagine grabbing him by the collar screaming in his face "I'm Robin!" No matter how scary I try to sound... they usually just laugh in my face. And I don't blame them it's ridiculous. A Robin just isn't scary.

Robin takes a minute, overcome with emotion.

But even with the name it was fun for a while. Staying up all night, crazy weapons, protecting people. But now a days, it gets harder and harder to put on that red and green and yellow outfit. I mean I'm not a kid anymore, and I'm realizing... I never went to college! I am completely unqualified for any job and if Batman decides to retire that's it! I have no idea what I'm going to do. It keeps me up at night. I'm so tied to... Batman. The Batman... whatever.

Robin takes deep breath.

Anyway, I'm so thankful for this room. For all of you.

ROBIN (CONT'D)

It's because of this Side Kick Support group that I'm able to find my inner strength. To find my self worth and to realize that... when I hang up my tights on put on my street clothes... that's Grayson's time. A time where I can be my own super hero. Thank you.
